

Sticky knowledge

- Most cities are located next to a river as rivers are a good way of transporting goods. This was a much faster option than land transportation before we had planes and other modern transportation.
- Countries can make money by selling natural resources found in their country or by the things that they make.
- Countries can buy resources that cannot be found in their country or they cannot make or grow from other countries.
- Selling goods to other countries is called exporting. Buying goods from abroad is called importing.
- The UK imports more goods than what we export.
- Physical features can have a big impact on where people choose to settle.

Skills I can...

- Use a map to identify different human and physical features
- Choose an area to settle using my new knowledge of trade links, physical features, human features and natural resources.
